Adobe Photoshop provides a huge choice of titles in the online bookstore. For a variety of reasons these titles are not all available to buy via POD. New books on Photoshop are appearing all the time, so it's not surprising to see Photoshop titles on POD. It is possible to self-publish a printed and electronic version, so if you want to create your own Photoshop books, you can do so yourself, making a much better product than what you can find on POD. Marketing Photoshop Just as you would market a new product or service, you should market Photoshop to potential authors and consumers. Setting goals You need to establish exactly why you want to publish your Photoshop title. Have a clear plan, and make sure you are measuring whether your goals are achieved. Realizing the industry's use of Photoshop The industry uses Photoshop as a standard image manipulation and editing program, and because of this, it is easy to target those who will most likely purchase your Photoshop title. Targeting people who want to use Photoshop Targeted titles don't exclude anyone; they appeal to a wider audience. Targeting people who use Photoshop If you target Photoshop users specifically, then you have very specific information. Suggesting why someone might buy your Photoshop book If you're targeting people who use Photoshop, how can you persuade them to buy your book? Appealing to the user A user tends to buy a book that is easy to use or that is useful to them. So you need to make sure that your book fits the user's needs. Create a user profile with various factors, including personal information, to help you decide if your book can target that user or not. Are you a good fit for the market? Do you know enough about the market to know if you're a good fit or not? Don't waste your time writing a book about something you don't know. The Photoshop Bookshelf Photoshop is an annual publication that offers author interviews and features such as editors' choice, readers' choice, and design awards, along with reviews of recent photoshop titles. Suboptimal bone mineral density and low traumatic spinal fractures. A prospective study was conducted in order to investigate the relationship between bone mineral density and spinal fractures in female patients. The material consisted of all newly admitted female patients (n = 83) to a geriatric ward with a diagnosis of spinal fractures. Bone mineral density was measured at lumbar vertebral bodies in 66 of these 83 patients. Osteoporosis was found in 34% of the study group. Of the patients with spinal fractures 20% had osteoporosis. It is concluded that spinal fractures are associated with suboptimal bone mineral density in about 20% of cases. Q: Why does this statement change a referenced object? Q: Connect to non-standard LDAP server in code I am trying to connect to a non-standard LDAP server. The server does not offer standard LDAP operations and does not advertise itself as a LDAP server. I am not sure if this is possible, but I need to connect to an ActiveDirectory server, get all users and their information, and update them. I was wondering if I can do this via LDAP? A: The simplest way to connect to an LDAP server is to use Windows LDAP Services. The program can be started from the services panel of the Control Panel. Q: How can I write this loop in a vectorized way? I am hoping to be able to use vectorization instead of looping through each column of the original dataframe, but can't quite figure out the way to go about it. I have a dataframe where I have columns Year and Month, and each row has multiple rows of numbers. The data comes from a sensor that measures real time data in multiple metrics, and a file has formatted the data with all the values that were measured for each row of time. So I am reading the file and writing each row of data to an object that can be used later. It works, but the loop is just ugly, especially because its doing the same thing multiple times. Here is a reproducible example: df
