Biodiversity data management: implications for ecological biogeography. Biogeographers are faced with a variety of data management challenges, including the problem of lack of standardization, unclear goals, poor recording procedures, or the absence of strong archiving policies. In light of these obstacles, there is a need to consider certain aspects of biodiversity data management that can help improve their accessibility and integration in ecological studies. We conducted a survey of international institutions that maintain biodiversity databases and assessed the current curatorial practice in terms of accessibility and integration of data. Our results indicate that, to some degree, biodiversity data are poorly integrated into ecology and that curation improvements that will foster greater data accessibility are in order. In the culture and entertainment industries, “marketer” is often considered a derogatory term to describe someone who has a short-term view of a project and who is mainly concerned with sales. But with the right conditions and strong leadership, marketers can transform into change-makers and influencers. In a changing world, the marketing world needs creative people. Marketing, from a performance improvement perspective, will embrace this notion and embrace a change-maker mindset. As a creative, you can make the difference.

The rise of the new millennial worker According to research by Capgemini, millennials constitute 34% of the workforce, an almost 20% increase over the last 10 years. A “new workplace” is developing, and jobs have shifted from a primarily employer-employee relationship to more of a one-person-one-customer relationship. Here are a few ways in which this may impact marketing: Marketers must learn to understand the modern millennial worker and consumer and the concept of customer lifetime value In a world where engagement plays such an important part in customer satisfaction and profitability, some of the core marketing skillsets required by marketers today will have to embrace engagement. It's about relationship marketing. This isn't about selling to the current buyer but rather about initiating conversations with current and potential customers. You need to learn how to communicate with your customer to make sure they are satisfied and engaged. From a sales perspective, this is another skill that needs to be embraced by marketers. Not only do we need to learn how to engage with customers, but we also need to learn how to converse with potential customers. Marketing is about customer service and value creation. How do we service and value our customers?
