)\$ is no greater than $O((\ell+1)^{2n+1})$. The approximation introduced in Theorem [\[thm:greedy_strong_cons\]](#) requires greater care, taking $\ell+1$ steps of the carry-over of the guard positions into the index grid, and therefore results in a time complexity no greater than $O(\ell^{n+1}(\log \ell)^n + (\ell+1)^{2n+1})$. If the input is given in unary notation, then the approximation in Theorem [\[thm:greedy_strong_cons\]](#) can be further reduced. Theorem [\[thm:mod_fixed\]](#) presents another information-preserving algorithm. In this setting, there is an upper bound on the number of carried-over guard positions, which allows for the algorithm to terminate in the following case: Imagine that guard g_i contains 1 with i digits, and increasing the index through the sequence $(g_i)_{i \in \mathbb{N}}$ will increase the digit by at most 0.5 at each step. This implies that the number of times 1 is a carry-over to the next index is at most 0.5^n . Hence a number of iterations in the best case is given by the product of the number of guards, $f_g^{\leq n}(P)$, and 0.5^n . Clearly, in the worst case, every digit of the index of P needs to be increased at least once. The iteration time is then at most $0.5^n(2^{f_g^{\leq n}(P)} - 1) + 1$. The corresponding application of this scheme on the entirety of P gives rise to a length-preserving algorithm. Theorem [\[thm:multiple_application\]](#) considers the issue of stability for high-permutation algorithmic schemes, including the one proposed in Theorem [\[thm:greedy_stable\]](#). It shows that a full application of the scheme, that is putting the guards in the same order as the labeling, satisfies stability. Applying the same scheme in the reverse order, that is putting the guards in the reverse order, is shown not to satisfy it, as there
