Created by Evolution Sports, a world leader in motion capture technologies, HyperMotion Technology improves ball handling by identifying the moment of decision and then dynamically applying a variety of force feedback effects that help maintain the player's sense of balance. To complete the player experience, everything from player motion to on-ball camera angles is designed to best allow players to feel like they are facing the goal, running at the opposition, or tackling the ball. "We've taken what we learned from professional play to create the most authentic feeling in-game experience to date," said Casey Affleck, Head of Sports and Strategy for PlayFab. "Achieving that in FIFA is an incredibly complex task and we are thrilled to collaborate with Evolution Sports to move the game forward by leveraging their groundbreaking technology. We are confident that our collaboration with Evolution Sports will yield a new level of immersion in FIFA 22 and ultimately unlock the full potential of the game." The goal of HyperMotion Technology is to create the most authentic feeling of gameplay by using on-board data from a professional match and applying it to the player to improve ball handling. Its unique ball physics, based on the movement of a professional player's limbs, adds a new dimension to the soccer experience. The system employs motion capture data from a professional football game, collected by a pair of high-end motion capture suits that have been designed specifically for this purpose. Players recorded during the full match are used to populate and populate the motions in the game. Evolution Sports first applied this technology, now known as HyperMotion, in Madden NFL 25 in 2014. The Madden team, in partnership with its technology partner, placed motion capture suits in a professional football stadium that have been used to capture more than 4,000 individual full-speed collisions, 2,000 of which are used in the game. FIFA 22 introduces "HyperMotion Technology," which uses motion capture data collected from 22 real-life players playing a complete, high-intensity football match in motion capture suits. The data collected from player movements, tackles, aerial duels and on-ball actions is used to power FIFA 22 gameplay. Created by Evolution Sports, a world leader in motion capture technologies, HyperMotion Technology improves ball handling by identifying the moment of decision and then dynamically applying a variety of force feedback effects that help maintain the player's sense of balance.
