The six-month probe into the Department of Housing and Urban Development's (HUD) questionable use of a federal grant will continue, the Department of Housing and Urban Development confirmed on Thursday. "The investigation by the Office of Inspector General is ongoing," HUD Assistant Inspector General John Roth told The Washington Post in a statement. According to The Post, the investigation is focused on a $25 million housing grant that was awarded to three organizations to build public housing in New Jersey. These organizations, ACORN Housing NYC and ACORN Housing Atlanta, have been accused of perpetrating widespread voter fraud, including charging homeless people for food. "Since ACORN Housing New York and ACORN Housing Atlanta received the same grant under the same conditions, it is reasonable to assume that the two organizations could have engaged in similar conduct," a source familiar with the investigation told The Post. HUD, the source added, is investigating whether the grant was used "to finance voter registration drives and thereby perpetrate voter fraud." ACORN, a hardline liberal organization that has been in public infamy in recent years for failing to register hundreds of thousands of voters, has denied the allegations against it. Last week, a New Jersey judge tossed out ACORN's lawsuit to recover the $25 million grant after the organization was accused of using the money to fund voter-registration efforts in five states. In a statement released earlier in the week, ACORN said it is "reviewing the letter," and "will fully cooperate with any investigation of ACORN as it relates to the New Jersey project." "We regret that any of our affiliate groups may have engaged in activities that are contrary to our core values of justice, equality, and advocacy for the poor," ACORN president Bertha Lewis said. HUD, the source familiar with the investigation told The Post, began investigating the grant in October after the New Jersey Office of [1.5.1] Update For Faster, More Compliant GPS Coordinates. With this new release, we changed the format of our database to zip and other minor enhancements. If you were experiencing a slowdown, downloading or uploading our vCards, this was caused by the database format. To move forward with more than 5.000 coordinates, to increase the speed of our database and to be in compliance with the ETSI (European Telecommunications Standards Institute) recommendations, we had to change the format of our database. Do not worry if this happens to you. The only consequence of this update is a slowdown during your downloading or uploading of the database, because it is time consuming to extract/unzip the 5.000 entries. [1.3] GPS to vCard for V2.3.0 If you wish to update, you will have to download the file and import it manually. [1.2.2] After changing the format of the database, we made the program work more accurately. We also created a difference between points, destination and coordinates. The program will no longer import data that is partially incomplete. Therefore, the application is more compatible with different GPS navigation systems. Thanks to the feedback of our users and to the recommendations of ETSI (European Telecommunications Standards Institute), we have cleaned our database for better compliance and for more accurate import of GPS coordinates. [1.2.1] Main Improvements: Fixes for correct display of GPS coordinates and for better performance.
