Shattered Heart Adventure Path (5E) is a free-to-play tabletop roleplaying game for medium-hardcore 5E fans that enjoys a deep and rewarding relationship with its expansive lore, colorful characters, and classic ideas like a shared world, player-written mechanics, and crunchy economy. Please note this is a fully compatible alternative to the Shatterheart Adventure Path (5E) game which is available for sale at www.drivethrurpg.com. System: Using the 5E Core Ruleset, the Shatterheart Adventure Path is based on the Pathfinder RPG Rules as it was originally written in 2014. The Shatterheart Adventure Path is designed as a free and easy to play tabletop game for experienced players that do not wish to build their own campaign setting using copyrighted materials. All game statistics are based on the 5E Core Ruleset and the Dungeon Master's Guide. With rules on how to tailor the game to your play style, the Shatterheart Adventure Path (5E) is a new kind of Roleplaying game for the 5E community. Pricing and Availability: Available in PDF and Print-on-Demand editions from DriveThruRPG.com. Please note that the product is sold for free distribution but includes a license that may be used to purchase additional content. The companion PDF of Shattered Heart Adventure Path (5E) was designed for use with Fantasy Grounds III or later. Thou shalt not track the future's development from within the temple! Detailed relationships with recurring NPCs allow you to track the PCs' influence on the future development of Picollan society. Start on page 1 to learn how this free-to-play tabletop RPG originally wound up in the hands of a handful of self-publishing junkies and was eventually picked up by the fantasy roleplaying enthusiasts behind the internationally acclaimed tabletop RPG, Dungeons & Dragons. , Thomas the Rhymer and the Wolf and the Cranes In the thirteenth century David I (1124-53) asserted his Scottish kingship by seizing the lands of the Scottish southern Picts. His son and successor, William I (1153-89), conquered both the country and the favour of the Church, but David II's (1214-53) tribulations in England, the last of the Scottish Stuarts, drew attention to the situation in Scotland. He himself had kings crowned by the Archbishop of York, Thomas Becket, Thomas a Becket's brother Henry, and his brother Edward. Islay was established as a rex miles, the area of the Moray Firth between Inverness and Moray. Thomas the Rhymer's Land, in Aberdeenshire, lay east of the Firth, while the Kingdom of Moray lay west. In 1158 Thomas the Rhymer's prophecy was written down in the English Annals. Islay was later incorporated into Moray, and Thomas the Rhymer's prophecy seems to relate to this. Years later a series of minor chapels were built to commemorate the prophecy. Of these, Alloa, Aboyne, Lauchliebank and Dollar each have a chapel, and Kinloch Laggan is a ruin. The will is still read there at its annual meeting. The Wolf and the Cranes. In 1164 the English planted a colony on Mann, with a fort, watch tower and prison. These were known as Wolf and Cranes Forts. The English calling them and Inch Kenneth after a Manx natural feature called, also after a Manx legend, 'Cranesfort'. Without knowing the reason for this name they laid foundations on both islands. But when the weather stopped the reason for the name of a Manx harbour was known so the reason for the initial name of the English burghs was disregarded. On the last day, 1862, a loud explosion shattered the beach below the Cockle Ness battery. Later on Richard Bruce discovered in a well, at the cross on the old tel hill, that two cannon balls dropped into it, on that same day, in 1588, 1587 and 1586. They all had maker's marks on them! He also found written in the sand, "From Edinburgh etc! My Lord Mordaunt." There is evidence of what the beach looked like in the early
