The present invention relates to a data recording and playback system, and more specifically, to an improved magnetic tape drive system for replaying digital data recorded in an encoded format. Tape cassettes for recording data are well known in the art. One such system is called the Betamax.TM. cassette system. Data recorded in this system is encoded in a signal format as follows. The encoded signal to be recorded comprises a synchronization preamble of 8 bits, followed by an appended set of 7 data bits. The synchronization preamble provides a pattern to synchronize data that is recorded on tape with the data. The synchronization preamble is followed by the data bits which carry the data content of the signal. This data is encoded in a non-return to zero inverted (NRZI) signal format, with a one bit transition when a zero data state is being recorded, or a zero bit transition when a one data state is being recorded. This data is recorded in a surface code format onto a plurality of magnetic recording tracks on the tape. The tape is moved in a helical path by rotating two pairs of pinch rollers. One pair of rollers is stationary and serves as a guide roll for guiding the tape past a pair of tape record and playback heads. The other pair of rollers is a moving roller which serves as a pinch roller to contact the surface of the tape to pull it through the pair of stationary tape record and playback heads. A plurality of pairs of magnetic heads are placed along the width of the tape to record and playback data. A first pair of playback heads, in a playback mode, are used to detect and sense signals which are recorded on the tape and then fed to a data detector, a circuitry which is generally a preamplifier. The data detector includes a zero-going signal detector which senses and differentiates zero-going transitions of the NRZI format, and an edge detector which senses and differentiates the edges of the tape. The outputs of these detectors are supplied to a logic circuitry which detects the edges of the NRZI format and then decodes the data encoded in the NRZI format and reconstructs the data encoded in a non-NRZI data format. In order to playback the information from a tape recorded in the above described system, the tape is first loaded into the cassette and a tape drive is coupled to the tape cassette for moving the tape in a helical path past a stationary head. This stationary head includes the first playback pair of heads used to detect and sense

Note To create your own brush, you must first create a style first. A style is described in the box on the next page. 5. In the dialog box, select the type of brush you want to create, then click OK. Create a new brush that matches the cursor, as shown in Figure 2-13. Figure 2-13. The New Brush dialog box opens and provides a full list of brushes you can select from, as well as the ability to customize the brush's size, shape, and spacing settings. 6.
