The app needs to load some stuff on startup and every now and then perform some asynchronous work, the async works fine. But I have discovered that when doing it all in a single thread then it works fine. But when starting to run all within a single thread, a lot of business logic exception at loading are raised and it seems they are coming from the callback of the async method. I have not used async anywhere in that app so I am a bit baffled about what is happening here. Basically I have this bit of C#: `async Task DoStuff() { // Initialize var obj = new Foo(); // Begin async task await DoAsync(obj); // Return foo's instances return obj.Value; } private async Task DoAsync(Foo obj) { obj.DoSomethingAsync(); }` The DoSomethingAsync will occasionally throw, and when this happens, the exception is raised from the actual worker thread. I have not included any special framework code as I don't think that would be the cause of the problem, but if you want to have a look at what I have then here is the project on GitHub. To make matters more odd, there is also C++ code doing the same thing, but it does not produce the same kind of errors. Update I have discovered that the exception is being raised here: `Context.ApplicationInstance.DispatcherUnhandledException += (sender, e) =>`

Edit I have tried putting the font in the fonts directory and that seems to be working for now. I have also tried the answer found here to no avail. A: Kahiroman said in an answer to a question of the OP: Just change the hinting to either "sans-serif" (sans font) or "monospace" (mono font) I tested this and it does work. In the AVD_Settings.xml, this can be done in the following way:
